morrow—Punting to Feature.

From all indications, tomorrow's gridiron contest between University of Richmond and Wake Forest College, at Boulevard Park, will resolve itself into a battle botween punters of the respective elevens. Captain Broaddus, of the Spiders, has shown his value to Dobson with his skittful booting in previous games, while from North Carolina comes the report that Rhabenhorst, full back of Wake Forest, has set the football world after with his lengthy and consistent kicking.

Rhabenhorst is reported to have won a leading place among punters of the Tarheel elevens and records show that he is superior to Broaddus to some degree, in length of his drives. The Spider has a lusty boot.

football enclosure tomorrow should get their money's worth watching the competition. But this game within in a game will depend largely on the defensive and offensive abilities of the two teams, whether they will force each other to use the kicking game or not.

Heccent shifts made in the Spider team are slated to give the Red and Blue outfit more power in the back field, but their line will not be weakened, although left guard has been vacated by Klevesahl. With the material available to plug the hole, bobson will have to use ingenuity to sustain the fine defensive qualities of his left flank. Carlton, Booker and Hodges, while equaling Klevesahl's weight, need scasoning. They have worked at the guard position and either may start tomorrow.
